

AsyncAPI Finance Summary

To help improve the current state of Event-Driven Architectures and their tooling, you can show your support for the AsyncAPI Initiative by making a financial contribution. We offer three donation options: Open Collective, GitHub Sponsors, and Linux Foundation Crowdfunding. Our expenses are managed through Open Collective and GitHub Sponsors, while Linux Foundation Crowdfunding operates separately.

Ways to Support Us?

The easiest way to support AsyncAPI is by becoming a financial sponsor. While there are alternative options, they may involve greater effort. Contribute monetarily using the following channels

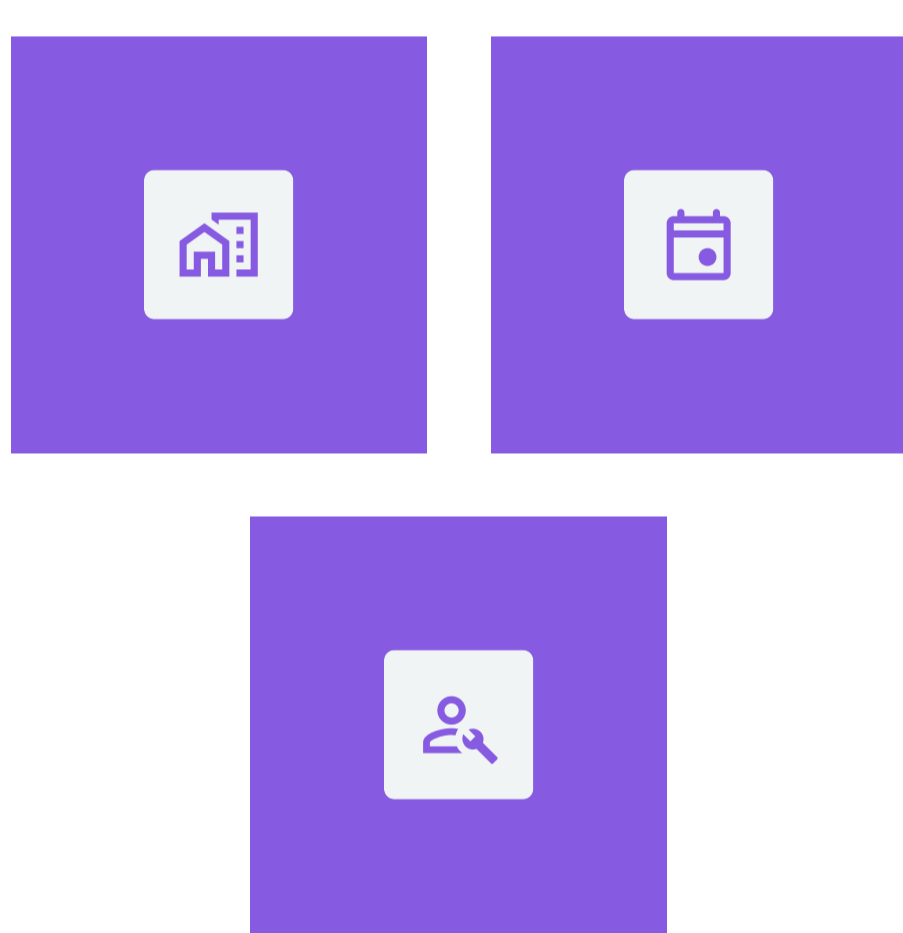

Sponsorship Tiers

AsyncAPI offers various sponsorship tiers, each with its own set of benefits and privileges. These tiers include Bronze, Silver, Gold, and Platinum.

Tiers	Amounts	Benefits
Bronze	$100/month	Company logo in README on GitHub
Sliver	$500/month	Company logo in README on GitHub and asyncapi.com
Gold	$1000/month	Company logo in README on GitHub and asyncapi.com
Platinum	$2000/month	Company logo in README on GitHub and asyncapi.com. Up to 2 hours of support per month. Support will be remote with the option of a shared screen or via private chat. Support hours do not accumulate.

Other forms of financial support

Employee involvement

Assign your employees to contribute to projects under AsyncAPI Initiative on a regular basis, and we'll welcome them as new maintainers. You can also provide direct assistance to a member of the Technical Steering Committee (TSC) through contracts or employment for specific tasks.

Event organization

Host AsyncAPI conferences by sponsoring and organizing events under the AsyncAPI brand at your provided venue.

Service provision

AsyncAPI Initiative relies on numerous tools, many of which incur costs. Your organization can provide services such as hosting or storage to support our efforts.

Expense Breakdown

Funds from GitHub Sponsors are directly transferred to our AsyncAPI Open Collective account. We maintain transparency in all expenses, and the TSC approves anticipated expenses.

Mentorship Program

Our AsyncAPI Mentorship program offers paid guidance to develop valuable features, investing in tools and motivated individuals for community benefit.

Bounty Program

Rewarding contributors regardless of affiliation or volunteer status. Free mentoring and support for newcomers to build portfolios and unlock tech prospects.

Events

Supporting AsyncAPI conferences incurs costs for services and travel arrangements. Your contributions facilitate event hosting and community growth.

Swag Store

Creating a swag store for seamless distribution to contributors, mentees, ambassadors, and community members. Store profits can fund complimentary swag expenses.

Hiring

To support our community, we require full-time commitment. Open Collective helps us hire for AsyncAPI. Thulie joins as community manager, with plans to expand the team. our team.

Services

Occasionally, we must pay for services such as Zoom or Descript, as they are not available through specific Open-Source support programs.

Success Stories

Thanks to financial support we can already see many success stories in the project.

Community Manager

With the addition of a dedicated Community Manager, we now have a monthly newsletter, regular status updates, an active social media presence, and the ability to drive initiatives such as event organization.

AsyncAPI Mentorship

The 2022 mentorship program yielded significant achievements: Kafka support in Glee, a centralized platform for sharing AsyncAPI tools, and a versatile error handling library for multiple projects.

AsyncAPI Conference

Every year we organize a conference that attracts many participants. Only last year the conference generated 3k views. We plan to do a series of events in different locations every year.
